The Coaching Kata

How to practice coaching the Improvement Kata pattern

Without coaching a learner may not practice the right pattern, or practice ineffectively. Without coaching, a change in our brain's wiring is less likely to occur. But coaching is a skill like any other, that takes practice. The Coaching Kata helps you develop skill in supporting learners as they practice the Improvement Kata.

The Coaching Kata is practiced by managers, supervisors and team leaders who want to coach their people in a scientific way of thinking and acting. Instructions for the Coaching Kata are in the Toyota Kata Practice Guide.

Coaching cycles - Just 20 minutes a day

One coaching cycle involves the coach asking the five Coaching Kata questions of the learner, who refers to their IK storyboard. This is done once per day at a scheduled time, plus as the need arises, taking 20 minutes or less each time. The five questions are the main headings in the coaching cycle dialog, and going through them has two main purposes:

- Reinforces the pattern of the Improvement Kata.
- Helps make the learner's current thinking apparent, so the coach can give appropriate feedback as necessary.

COACHING
KATA

The never-ending need for improvement and evolution in any organization gives you and your team the perfect setting for practicing new skills: while you do your normal work. The elegant trick is that as you practice and coach the Improvement Kata you are applying it to real goals, always to the best of you and your team's current level of ability.

THE 5 COACHING KATA QUESTIONS

Ask these questions daily, to help develop and mobilize your team's creative capability

1 What is the Target Condition?

2 What is the Actual Condition now?

3 What Obstacles do you think are preventing you from reaching the target condition? Which "one" are you addressing now?
